Job Description

Your Opportunity:

Alberta Health Services (AHS) is Canada's first and largest province-wide, fully integrated health system, responsible for delivering health services to the over four million people living in Alberta, as well as to some residents of Saskatchewan, British Columbia, and the Northwest Territories. AHS provides a wide range of learning opportunities for students. The AHS IT team is one of the largest in Canada and has over 2500 employees across the province. The IT Team is a very dynamic and driven group who engage in complex, challenging and diverse projects to deliver collective results. Through quality work and innovative solutions, we meet the ever-changing needs of Albertans.

Description:

Join our dynamic IT Community Care Services team as a student contributor, where you'll gain hands-on experience and mentorship from seasoned IT professionals. This role offers a meaningful opportunity to apply your academic learning in a real-world setting, while developing key skills in creativity, adaptability, and collaboration within a geographically distributed workforce. As part of this team, you'll support IT systems and solutions for Population Public Health and Indigenous Health programs, with a focus on Communicable Disease Outbreak Management. Your contributions will include: Assisting in the creation of technical documentation. Supporting the development of sustainable IT solutions. Investigating and diagnosing system issues. Contributing to the stability and reliability of operational systems. This position is open to current students only. You must be actively enrolled and continuing your studies in the upcoming academic term. Applicants must reside in Alberta for the duration of the placement. Please note: relocation costs are not subsidized. Individuals who have graduated or will graduate prior to the placement start date are not eligible to apply.
